204 Shri K B Vaeranwamy (Kalavat is Reserved) Will the hon Minister for Public Health, Medical and Education be pleased to state—

1 Whether the School of Commerce run by the Government is not superfluous as there are other well run private institutions which impart instruction in commercial subjects? What is the necessity for running this School in these circumstances?

2 Whether the Administration Report has been received by the Government in respect of the working of the School of Commerce? If not why not?

The Minister for Public Health, Medical and Education (Shri Phoolchand Gandhi)

1 Government does not think that the Central School of Commerce is superfluous.

This school is having a course of Diploma in Commerce and Banking which no private institution is having. This diploma is recognised by the Osmania University as being equivalent to I Com for purposes of admission to B Com.

Before the school was started private institutions were conducting examinations in Shorthand and Typewriting and giving certificates in large numbers. The holders of these certificates were not up to the mark. Now on account of the high standard of the examinations in this school better trained students are being produced.
Pitman's and the London Chamber of Commerce who found that the examinations which were conducted previously by private institutions as their agents were not conducted satisfactorily have now entrusted the work to this school.

In view of the above the necessity for continuance of this School is established.

2 The answer is in the affirmative. The annual reports of this school are received by the Special Officer Department of Technical and Vocational Education and scrutinised by him. Relevant statistics are reported in the Annual Administration Report submitted by the Special Officer to Government.

Shri K R Venkateswamy May I know the amount spent on this Institution?

Shri Phoolchand Gandhi The amounts spent are as follows —

L. A. Bill No. XIX of 1952: A Bill to Amend the Hyderabad Shops and Establishments Act, 1951

The Minister for Labour, Information Planning and Rehabilitation (Shri V. B. Raju): Sir, I beg to move that L. A. Bill No. XIX of 1952, a Bill to amend the Hyderabad Shops and Establishments Act, 1951, be read a first time.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved.

Shri V. B. Raju: Mr. Speaker: Sir, it is more than a year since the Hyderabad Shops & Establishments Act has been promulgated and enforced in 16 centres covering 26,000 shops which employ nearly 40,000 employees. The places are Hyderabad, Secunderabad, Aurangabad, Wurgal, Gulbarga, Ruchu, Ilingoli, Jaina, Nanded, Nizamabad, Latur, Khammam, Yadga and the town committees of Selur, Peddapally and Uran. Within this one year, lots of complaints have been pouring in and the number of complaints has exceeded 1,000. The nature of the complaints has been duly examined and the Department has endeavoured to fill up the gaps and to tighten up certain measures so that the very purpose for which this Act was framed was not defeated. The very aspiration or the idea behind the Government in bringing this Act was not only to regulate the working conditions by fixing the working hours leave holidays and so on but also to provide some sort of security of service. With the coming in of these rigorous measures many of the employees had been exposed to discharge some times for no fault of their but for the fact of having demanded that strict enforcement of the Act must be done by the employer. It is in this Act alone—it is in Hyderabad alone that a sort of retrenchment benefit has been provided at the rate of 16 days wages for every year of service if the employee is discharged. This is no doubt a bold step but Government felt that it is not being honoured properly by the employers. On a fine morning the employer asks the employee to get out and the employee with the empty hands is compelled to move in the streets in search of employment while his family starves. In order to see that the employee is not driven to such a situation the Government felt necessary to make a provision of gratuity at the rate of 16 days for every year of service so that the money that he would get after his discharged would keep his soul and body together till he gets an occupation elsewhere. But the employer in many a case would not keep the records properly. There is always dispute in the matter of settlement when the employer demands money. For instance if the employer demanded Rs. 500 the employer would tell him that he would not give him more than Rs. 50. Thus there used to be a lot of disparity in the figures quoted by both the parties with the result that could not machinery to settle the matter without causing much inconvenience to the employee. Now the main amendment in the Amending Bill is in relation to that. If an employee complains that he has not been paid gratuity according to the number of years that he has served with a particular employer he will have the recourse to approach the authorities specified in the Amendment Bill to get his grievance redressed or to effect the settlement quickly. The amendment would also help intransigent employers or reluctant employers who refuse to come to a settlement to be penalised—it is not exactly penalisation they would be compelled to pay wages till the date of settlement & not exceeding one month. Thus one month has been fixed in consideration of the fact that the employee should not misuse this concession to his advantage. The idea behind all this is not to allow the litigation to be prolonged—the idea is that the two interests employees and employers should be brought together and the authorities who are empowered under this amendment should effect a settlement. The indication is also to settle the claims within a period of one month.

That is the idea behind this amendment.

The other amendment relates to the application of Section 15 of the Payment of Wages Act. There are two things which will be covered by Section 15 of the Payment of Wages Act.

One is the realisation of such dues collected in an unauthorised manner and also the empowering of the Inspector under the Shops and Establishments Act, as an authority for such purposes. Hitherto there was no provision for recovery of any unauthorised collections by the employer and thus provision is being made now. These amendments are merely technical in nature because when the Shops and Establishments Act was promulgated the Central enactments—the Factories Act as well as the Payment of Wages Act—were not extended to Hyderabad. The local enactments were mentioned in this Act and now that the Central legislation has been extended to Hyderabad also the mentioning of that has become necessary in place of the one that is already there. They are merely technical.

Then, another important amendment is providing retiring benefits—the provision of gratuity relief to individual discharged employees. When the employer discharges an employee, the employee has a right to ask for gratuity but if an employee has to get out of service of his own accord, he should give notice so to say an employee who gets out of service of his own accord is not entitled for gratuity. But there will be people who reach the stage of superannuation and who after having served for twenty, twenty-five or even thirty years with a particular employer would retire owing to pressure of circumstances and yet would not get the benefit of gratuity. So for those persons who retire after reaching the superannuation stage gratuity would be provided through this amending bill.

These are the several features relating to the amendments proposed in this amending bill. In my opinion and in the opinion of the Government these are non controversial and would add to the benefits of the employees. Several joint meetings have been held with the representatives of the employers and the employees and after having obtained their views on these matters these amendments have been brought. I hope the House will receive these amendments in the spirit with which they have been brought and will accept them.
Mr Speaker The question is

That L A Bill No XIX of 1952 be read a first time

The motion was adopted

Mr Speaker The amendments to this bill may be submitted in the office till 10 a.m. tomorrow so that they may be cyclostyled and supplied to members. There is another bill which may also be introduced so that the members may have sufficient time to study the bill. This may also be moved now.

L A Bill No XX of 1952 A Bill for Making Provision for Proper Housing for Labour

Shri V B Raja Mr Speaker Sir I beg to introduce L A Bill No XX of 1952 a bill for making provision for proper housing for labour

Mr Speaker The bill is introduced

Copies of this bill will be supplied to the members now so that they may go through it. I would like to know how much time would be required to study the bill. It consists of about 48 sections. I think the first reading can be taken up after we finish the three readings of Bill No XIX. Amendments to this bill may be submitted day after tomorrow.
Mr. S V B Raju I hope the hon. Members after reading the bill will change their opinion. The number of sections in the bill is no doubt very large but they are routine matters simply formal things. Two or three sections are very important like the constitution of the corporation, its composition, etc.

Mr. Speaker After the first reading we will decide the quantum of time that will be required for submitting amendments. Now we will adjourn.

The House then adjourned till Two of the clock on Saturday the 1st July 1952.
