Mr. Speaker: All these cut motions are now before the House.
In its essentials, the labour policy and approach to the industrial relations outlined in the First Five Year Plan will also hold for the period of the Second Plan, although necessarily some change and adoptions will be needed in view of the determination to achieve a Socialistic pattern of society. Increase in the scope of public sector will place heavy responsibility on workers in that sector. Also if conditions of work in the public undertakings are expected to act as an example for the private sector. The administrators in charge of these undertakings have to be especially watchful of the interests of the workers. A labour policy secures this objective and receives the general support from the interests concerned if evolved through the work of a representative panel on labour which was constituted by the Planning Commission about the middle of 1955. The suggestions which are briefly explained below are in the main the result of deliberations of this Panel.

[Smt. T. Lakshmi Kanthamma in the Chair]

R. T. D. concern Q R concern. It is necessary to constitute separate corporations for these concerns. They should be able to operate independently and efficiently. This will help in better control and management of operations. The concerns should be able to meet their expenses and financial obligations. They should be able to operate at a profit or in a break-even position.

It is necessary to integrate the operations of these concerns. This will help in achieving economies of scale and scope. It will also help in reducing costs and increasing efficiency. The concerns should be able to meet the demands of the market and meet the needs of the customers.

Government undertakings have regulatory powers and can integrate operations. Private concerns can also integrate operations if they so desire. They can do this on a voluntary basis. Government undertakings can do this on a mandatory basis.

As far as Anti-labour Policy is concerned, the Government has already taken steps to protect the interests of workers. The concerns should also adopt measures to protect the interests of workers. This will help in maintaining a balance between the interests of employers and employees.

In my view, as long as compulsory adjudication is present in the picture as a machinery for the settlement of disputes, the voluntary system can hardly succeed. Unless compulsory adjudication is totally removed from the Statute Book—lock, stock and barrel—the parties, during the period of mutual negotiation or voluntary arbitration, will not place all their cards on the table but will reserve Ace 1 for the final game of compulsory adjudication. There is no need for fear that there would be a large scale unrest in industries leading to chaos and anarchy by the total abolition of compulsory method for the State part. The State as a supreme guardian of the vital subjects of law and order can always have recourse to emergency legislation or ordinances.

The Minister for planning (Sri V. B. Raju) :- Tribunals are, no doubt, appointed by the Government. But, they are independent and autonomous bodies.

Sri R. Narayan Reddy (Bhongir) :- The hon. Member has a right to criticise, I suppose.

Sri V. B. Raju :- I do not object to the criticism. The point is whether the Government can be criticised for the decisions of the tribunals.

The incident described below is a classic example of how a small error in a system can lead to significant vulnerabilities.

Incident

- Event: An employee at a local bank, upon logging into the system, noticed that the balance of a customer's account was unusually high. Upon further investigation, it was discovered that the account had been drained of funds.

- Action: The employee immediately notified the IT department and the police. The IT team then began to trace the transactions and discovered that the funds had been transferred to a foreign bank.

- Result: The bank was able to recover the stolen funds, and the perpetrators were eventually caught and charged with fraud.

This incident highlights the importance of robust security measures and the need for employees to be vigilant in detecting and reporting potential threats.

Exploit

- Means: A security vulnerability in the bank's accounting software allowed unauthorized access to user accounts.

- Impact: The vulnerability enabled the unauthorized transfer of funds from one account to another.

- Prevention: Regular security audits and updates to the software can help prevent such incidents in the future.

Check

- Verifying Condition: The bank implemented additional security features, such as two-factor authentication, to ensure that such incidents do not occur again.

- Outcome: The bank has not experienced any similar incidents since the implementation of these measures.

This incident serves as a reminder of the importance of security in financial institutions and the need for constant vigilance and improvement.
