Written Answers to Questions (Unstarred). 8th February, 1979. 41

(f) the action taken, if any, if proposed to be taken against the officials who had incurred unnecessary expenditure?

A.—

(a) The work was started on 20th April, 1969 and completed in the month of November, 1971.

(b) The cost of the estimate was Rs 57,300 and expenditure incurred on this work for completion is Rs 63,298

(c) The extent of land proposed under this scheme is 155 acres. The ayacut is yet to be developed. So far, the ryots are raising sugarcane in about 20 acres with wells. Water is not available throughout the year as the Nandi Kandi vagu is not perennial and it is only a diversion scheme. Water is available from the anicut in rainy season only. Ryots have to be persuaded to raise suitable short term crops.

(d) and (e) The lands on both the flanks of the river are B.C. Soil and the ryots are raising sugarcane in about 20 acres with wells, which is a 12 months’ crop and the water cannot be made available throughout the year, as this is not a perennial river and also this is only a diversion scheme. The anicut is in bad condition and channels are silted up and this requires Rs 30,000 approximately for repairing. The commandable area under this scheme is only 35 acres in tail end out of 155 acres proposed. This is one of the reasons for non-development of full ayacut. Further the ryots are not coming forward to take water to cultivate paddy.

(f) The scheme was taken up on representation from the ryots of Nandikandi village to take up this scheme even by advancing contribution. But now the ryots are not eager to take water from anicut and they have to be persuaded to take water and develop their lands. It may not therefore be proper to classify the expenditure as unnecessary and the question of taking action on the officials may not therefore arise.
